

DONATE CANNED FOOD – GET FREE FILMS

One in every ten Australians relies on food relief at some point over the course of any given year.

Shocking. Tragic. Unbelievable. They're all words that perfectly describe what's largely a hidden problem in Australia: the need for hunger relief.

But Network Video New Farm is trying to change the conversation, by showing how much ordinary Australians care about each other. Network Video New Farm is proud to present the sixth annual Cans4Films Festival, an in-store initiative that's designed to provide tangible help in delivering hunger relief across the nation.

Helping is simple - do your bit to end hunger by simply donating a can of food at your local Network Video store and in doing so, you will receive a free weekly rental; donate two cans and receive three free weekly rentals. You get a great night's entertainment, and you ensure that someone's not going hungry.

If you don't have any spare cans, you can still contribute by offering a gold coin donation in-store, which will then be used to purchase more cans of food to feed those who need it the most.

And it's a solution that works - since its inception, Network Video through Cans4Films has raised more than 310,000 cans of food nationally, that have been delivered to local food shelters and charities. That equates to more than 150 tonnes of food.

Every year, two million Aussies rely on food relief at some point - alarmingly, children make up half that figure. And for a problem that touches so many people in Australia, it's one that seems to be swept under the table; but make no mistake: this issue is real and it's impacting more lives than you might expect.

Network Video New Farm is located in the Central Brunswick complex, Brunswick St, Fortitude Valley
